IN DEPORTATION PROCEEDINGS

APPEAL

ON BEHALF OF RESPONDENT: Edward L. Dubroff, Esquire

ON BEHALF OF I&N SERVICE: Mary Jo Grotenrath
Appellate Trial Attorney

ORAL ARGUMENT: December 6, 1976

CHARGE:

ORDER: Section 241(a)(2), I&N Act (8 U.S.C. 1251
(a)(2)) - Nonimmigrant crewman-remained longer than permitted

APPLICATION: Withholding of deportation

This case presents an appeal from a decision of the immigration judge on July 19, 1976, finding the respondent deportable and granting him the privilege of voluntary departure, with an alternate order of deportation to Chile. The immigration judge denied the respondent's application for withholding of deportation, pursuant to the provisions of section 243(h) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, as amended. The appeal will be dismissed.

The respondent is a native and citizen of Chile, who was admitted to the United States on July 9, 1969, as a nonimmigrant crewman authorized to remain here for a period of time not to exceed 29 days. He was not apprehended by the Service until May 11, 1976. The respondent is still in this country. Deportability has been established by clear, convincing and unequivocal evidence.

The immigration judge noted that the respondent had been a member of and worked for the Liberal Party while living in Chile. The immigration judge found the respondent's testimony inconsistent as to the length of time he had given speeches against the Chilean Government prior to his departure in July 1969. Further finding that the respondent's fear of persecution if deported to Chile was based solely on speculation, the immigration judge denied his application for withholding of deportation.

Upon review of the record, including the contentions of counsel at oral argument, we are satisfied that the decision of the immigration judge was correct. The respondent's wife, three children, father and sister still reside in Chile and apparently have not been subject to any persecution. The respondent claimed that, "I'm the only one with political ideas in the family." (Tr. p. 20). Although he initially admitted membership in the Communist Party (Ex. 3), less than two months later the respondent stated in an affidavit that "I was never a member of, a supporter of, or associated with the Communist Party."

We find that the respondent has failed to show a well-founded fear that his life or freedom would be threatened in Chile on account of his race, religion, nationality, membership in a particular social group or political opinion. See Matter of Dunar, Interim Decision 2192 (BIA 1973). We conclude that the respondent would not be persecuted if deported to Chile. Accordingly, the appeal will be dismissed.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.

FURTHER ORDER: Pursuant to the immigration judge's order, the respondent is permitted to depart from the United States voluntarily within 31 days from the date of this order or any extension beyond that time as may be granted by the District Director; and in the event of failure so to depart, the respondent shall be deported as provided in the immigration judge's order.

Trial Attorney

ORAL DECISION OF THE IMMIGRATION JUDGE

Respondent is a 29 year old married male alien, a native and citizen of Chile, who last arrived in the United States at New York on July 9, 1969. At that time he was admitted as a nonimmigrant crewman authorized to remain in the United States not to exceed 29 days. He remained in the United States beyond that time.

It indicates in his passport that he was admitted as a C-1 to join a ship. Through his attorney he has admitted that he is deportable from the United States on the charge contained in the Order to Show Cause.

The record established that at the time of his arrival he was in possession of a valid Chilean passport which contained a C-1 type transit visa, which was issued in Chile and also a D visa which was issued in Chile. It appears that he did enter the United States as a crewman.

The respondent has applied for the privilege of voluntary departure from the United States in lieu of deportation. He has also testified that if he was to be granted voluntary departure he would depart the United States at his own expense but he has refused to designate a country in case deportation should become necessary. He has stated that if he be directed to be deported to Chile he could not return to Chile, the country of his citizenship, because he would be persecuted. He thereupon submitted an application for temporary withholding of deportation under Section 243(h) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, claiming that his deportation to that country would result in persecution. He has asserted that his claim for political asylum from Chile is based upon the fact that while he was in Chile he spoke out against the government in the form of giving speeches on corners and also at different rallies. In his affidavit he stated that between 1966 and 1968 he spoke at an average of once a week. In his testimony in front of me, he stated that he only spoke approximately one year. There is inconsistency in his testimony as to the length of time he gave these speeches. Nevertheless, he has submitted no other evidence whatsoever to sustain his claim for political asylum other than the fact that if he was to return to Chile he would be thrown in jail and possibly persecuted and killed because of these speeches he made.

He further testified that he is married and his wife is presently living in Chile. He has three children, ages 10, 9 and 7, who are living in Chile and a father and a sister who are living in Chile. He testified that neither his father, nor his sister, nor his children are being persecuted in Chile and the reason why they are not being persecuted is because they are not politically minded. He further testified that his wife in Chile has left his children with his father and he does not know her whereabouts and that his father, at the present time, is caring for the children and supporting these children. He in no way is helping for their support because his father has taken on this burden. The respondent further testified that he is presently living with a female who he is not married to, and has two children born of this adulterous relationship, both born in the United States. He is presently seeking to divorce his wife in Chile and marry this female who he is living with.

The Service presented to the Office of Refugee and Migration Affairs, on May 14, 1976, the claim of political asylum and they did not receive any reply and therefore denied his application for political asylum in the United States. Nevertheless, I am not in any way basing my decision on the information submitted to the Bureau of Refugee and Migration and I am only basing my decision on the evidence before me.

Under 8 CFR 242.17(c) the respondent is charged with the burden of establishing that he would be subject to persecution if he was deported to Chile. After carefully analysing all the evidence of the record I find that the respondent has failed to satisfy this requirement. The Court, in Cheng Fai Fu v. INS, 386 F.2d 750 2nd Cir. 1967 cert. denied 390 US 1003, stated that the respondent must show that he would be singled out as an individual by the governmental authority and suffered persecution therefrom in order to establish a clear probability of persecution. This the respondent has not done. The respondent's claim is solely on speculation that he would be persecuted if he returned to Chile because of these alleged speeches he had made in Chile. I will therefore deny his application for withholding of deportation under Section 243(h).

He has requested that he be granted voluntary departure. He has never been arrested. There is a question if he has ever been a member of the Communist Party. The Service has alleged that on his application for political asylum he stated he was a member of the Communist Party in question 20. Other than the statement on the application, no evidence has been submitted to me that he has been a member of the Communist Party. The respondent has denied that he has been a member of the Communist Party. I will assume that he has never been a member of the Communist Party. Although he is living in an adulterous relationship with a female, and has two children born of this relationship, no evidence has been submitted to me that this relationship disturbed his viable marriage back in Chile, or the marriage in Chile in any way was viable. I will therefore grant him voluntary departure.

ORDER: IT IS ORDERED that the respondent's application for withholding of deportation to Chile under Section 243(h) of the Immigration and Nationality Act as amended be denied.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that in lieu of an order of deportation respondent be granted the privilege of voluntary departure, without expense to the government, on or before August 19, 1976 or any extension beyond such date as may be granted by the district director and under such terms and conditions as the district director shall direct.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that if the respondent fails to depart when and as required the privilege of voluntary departure shall be withdrawn without further notice or proceedings and the following order shall thereupon become immediately effective: respondent shall be deported from the United States to Chile on the charge contained in the Order to Show Cause.

COUNTY OF NEW YORK)

MARCELLO CASTRO, being duly sworn, deposes and says:

I make this affidavit in support of my application for political asylum in the United States.

I arrived in the United States on July 9, 1969. Prior to my arrival in the United States from Chile I was a member of and working for the Liberal Party. I was a speech maker and I addressed many street rallys. Between 1966 and 1968 I spoke on the average of once a week. I worked directly under Senator Pedro Ibanez. Since the advent of the military government in Chile all leaders of the Liberal Party and other political party's have been persecuted, jailed and some intentionally killed. The whereabouts of Senator Pedro Ibanez are presently unknown and it is assumed that he fled the country. One of the people with whom I worked, a Mr. Ibar, and certain other members of the Liberal Party have been imprisoned by the military government. Many political figures have been put in concentration camps merely because of their political associations.

At the time I was caught by the Immigration Service I was interviewed by a Mr. Kampel in English. At that time I gave him a statement regarding my political activities. After giving him the statement he told me to sign it without reading the statement or having it read to me.

I hereby state under oath that I was never a member of, a supporter of, or associated with the communist party.
